Dietary Fats and Cholesterol

How do the fats in our food affect our blood cholesterol levels?

- Saturated and Trans fats increase the bodies LDL 'lousy' cholesterol, which causes plaque build up on artery walls and increases our risk of heart disease
- Unsaturated fats improve the bodies HDL 'healthy' cholesterol, which can reduce the risk of plaque build up and improve heart health
- Some polyunsaturated fats are high in omega 3 fatty acids with health benefits including: reducing blood pressure and inflammation
- Including 2-3g of plant sterols daily and increasing intake of soluble fibre can help to improve your cholesterol levels

Recommendation: Choose unsaturated fats over saturated fats
